Earthquake kills 10,000 people in south India

The Associated Press

DELHI, India — A major earthquake struck the dawn quiet Thursday, collapsing walls and mortar homes onto sleeping families across southern India. More than 10,000 died and many more cried for help from the wreckage.

Authorities feared the death toll would rise substantially in India's worst quake in a half century.

Villages were leveled so quickly as the shock violently opened crevices that people were crushed inside their homes while sleeping, news agencies reported.

The rising sun created darkness for us this morning, swallowed up our villages and made our houses into tombs," a survivor told a reporter.

Some survived when frantic rescuers heard victims shouting for help beneath toppled walls and roofs, or saw a hand reaching out from the wreckage, Press Trust of India reported.

Friends, neighbors and police strained to lift stone, brick and wood by hand to free victims.

The quake ripped through southwest India at 3:56 a.m. It was felt at least 400 miles from the epicenter and caused a wide swath of damage.

The death tolls given by state officials and news reports varied from 6,200 to 12,000.

By nightfall, the death toll was more than 6,200, said N. Raghunathan, chief secretary of Maharashtra, adding that more than 2,000 bodies had been recovered. He said 3,000 people were killed in each of two districts, Umarga and Killari.

State-run Doordarshan TV raised the toll to more than 10,000 and said more than 12,000 people could still be trapped. The United News of India later put the death toll at 12,000.

About 10,000 people were injured, said Raghunathan.

The epicenter was near Maharashtra's southeastern border with Madhya Pradesh and Andhra Pradesh states.

One of the worst hit towns was Umarga, 270 miles southeast of Bombay. Some 3,000 people died and 60 percent of the town's buildings were destroyed, Raghunathan said.

"Those few seconds seemed to last forever," said Solani Bhagwat, 35. "I didn't know how it happened. It was dark and I could hear people shrieking and howling. Only when the sun came out did I realize they were all trapped in their houses."

Inside the town's small, overcrowded hospital, hundreds of injured people lay wailing on floors or in a tent set up in a courtyard.

"We don't have enough drugs and bandages," Dr. Ahiwin Solekar said as he rushed from one patient to another.

About 80 percent of the village of Killari, which has 10,000 people, was flattened, said senior police officer S.P. Wathore in Bombay, the capital of Maharashtra.

Huge cracks opened in the ground, swallowing homes, witnesses said.

Relief workers had trouble reaching some villages that recently lost their roads and bridges to heavy monsoon rains.

More than 50 villages sustained heavy damage and casualties, officials said. Minor damage also was reported from towns and villages hundreds of miles away.

Army officials said four medical teams reached remote areas and engineering units were equipped to set up drinking water points. Community kitchens were erected in the disaster zone.

The International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies on Thursday sent $66,000 in emergency funds to help

Law background unusual for university presidents

By MATTHEW FRANCK
Campus Editor

College presidents go, BYU President Rex E. Lee is both typical and unique.

For the most part, he is white, male and in his 50s. However, unlike 96.9 percent of the nation's 2,435 college heads, Lee has a law background.

Since 1951, when Ernest L. Wilkinson was chosen for BYU's top job, the University has had a lawyer-president for all but eight years. Only President Jeffrey R. Holland, who held the post from 1981 to 1985, was had another academic background — education.

President Lee, who sees the trend as a coincidence than a formula, said about Holland being "the odd one out."

Suppose he became president and he was so smart he was able to overcome the obvious handicap of being a lawyer," he said.

Setting aside, President Lee says he doesn't think the Board of Trustees sets out to find only lawyers for the spot.

He said only the presidents of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints who called Wilkinson, former president Dallin H. Oaks and himself to head the University would know to what extent legal experience factored into their selection.

"You might also consider that all four of the last presidents are right-handed and three of them were bald or balding," said President Lee, who stressed that presidents he has served under were selected for who they are, and not their academic background.

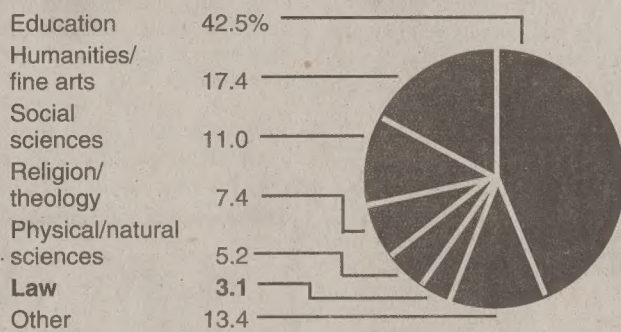

"Wilkinson would have definitely been picked, even if he would have been a chiropractor," he said. "He was simply the obvious peg for the job."

President Lee plays down the speculation that BYU may favor law-experienced presidents because it is a unique school which must often defend its image.

"The truth is any background will be helpful to a person who occupies the

College Presidents

According to a recent study of 2,435 college presidents by the American Council on Education, the typical college president is white, male, married, 54 years old and has been on the job for seven years. The study also gave this breakdown of what educational background college presidents have.

president's office," he said.

President Lee also speculated that if only major universities were surveyed, the percentage of lawyer-presidents would be greater because so many of their responsibilities involve legal issues.

ATF top officials in Waco raid disciplined by Bentsen

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen replaced the head of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms on Thursday, suspending five other top officials after a scathing report faulted the raid on the Texas religious cult in which four agents died. Bentsen said the raid on the Branch Davidians near Waco upon learning that cult leader David Koresh knew they were coming, Bentsen said.

He announced that he was immediately replacing the agency's director, Stephen Higgins, with John Magaw, head of the Secret Service who will serve as acting head of ATF. Higgins had announced plans Monday to retire on Oct. 30.

"Corrective steps are necessary," Bentsen said.

He released the report of an investigation that said the agency's plan for the operation was "based on seriously flawed assumptions" about Koresh

The report found "disturbing evidence of flawed decision making, inadequate intelligence gathering, miscommunication, supervisory failures and deliberately misleading post-raid statements about the raid."

Three of Higgins' top deputies were placed on paid administrative leave along with two Houston-based agents who commanded the operation at the scene.

The two field commanders made false statements to their superiors and Treasury Department investigators and altered their original planning document "in a concerted effort to conceal their errors in judgment," the report asserted.

"And top ATF management, perhaps out of a misplaced desire to protect the agency from criticism, offered accounts based on those raid commanders' statements, disregarding evidence that those statements were false," the report said.

Higgins had joined other agency officials in describing the raid's failure as an unexpected ambush.

Notre Dame tickets in demand

By JOSH LUKE
Universe Sports Writer

Were you a BYU football fan and you had $100 to spend, what would you do with it?

a) Buy a plane ticket, fly to Los Angeles, purchase a ticket to the UCLA game and still have money to buy a hot dog and popcorn, or b) Buy an end zone ticket to the home game against Notre Dame. The answer is obvious. You would buy the 75-cent special ticket.

Right, ticket brokers in Salt

Lake City are selling tickets to the game for anywhere from $75 to $300. Most are asking at least $100. What may be even more surprising is ticket brokers in South Bend are asking $400 to $500 for a single ticket.

"People keep calling here asking for tickets," said Notre Dame associate ticket manager Jim Bell, "and all we can tell them is that we only got 2,000 tickets to the game and they were sold out by June. Ticket brokers around here and in Chicago are selling the tickets starting at $400 and up."

In Provo, meanwhile, signs can be seen all over for people buying and selling tickets. Ticket scalping is not illegal in the state of Utah, although it is against the law to sell the tickets on BYU property.

Many students who bought their student season tickets are selling their Notre Dame ticket for much more than the $5 they paid for it.

BYU ticket manager David Miles says it is not against the rules for students to sell their tickets, but the person who buys it must buy a guest pass if he or she is not a BYU student. The guest pass is priced so the person will be paying just as much as they would if they had bought a non-student ticket.

Coach LaVell Edwards said he doesn't like the scalping that goes on, but it is part of sports. He said he doesn't remember another game where the ticket situation was so crazy.

One ticket broker from Salt Lake City said he sells tickets to most games for $17 to $20, but he is asking at least $150 for Notre Dame seats. He said ticket prices will drop slightly the closer the game gets, but outside the stadium on game day they will likely sell for $200.

Notre Dame is ranked fourth in the USA Today/CNN Coaches Poll with a 4-0 record, while BYU is ranked 17th with a 4-0 record. Last year at South Bend, Notre Dame beat BYU by a score of 42-16.

The game will be broadcast live on ESPN at 5:30 p.m. on Oct. 16.

White House proposes pension plan reform

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration unveiled legislation Thursday designed to shore up financially troubled pension plans that threaten the retirement security of millions of workers and retirees.

The financial security of thousands of Americans covered by single-employer pension plans is at risk because their pensions are underfunded," Labor Secretary Robert B. Reich told reporters.

An underfunded plan does not have the assets necessary to pay for its promised benefits.

Reich said the underfunding has grown from $27 billion in 1987 to an estimated $45 billion last year and "poses an unnecessary and unacceptable risk for workers and retirees."

The underfunding also jeopardizes the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp., the government insurer. It already faces a $2.7 billion deficit.

The proposal would double the insurance premium for the most troubled plans, which Reich said "would guarantee increased financing of underfunded pension plans" at the same time it reduces the PBGC deficit.

It also includes requirements for faster and more certain contributions to underfunded plans.

Mystery strain of hantavirus appears

ATLANTA — A never-before-seen strain of hantavirus has turned the lungs of at least 40 people in 11 states to soup, killing 24 of them.

Hantavirus causes kidney disease in Asia, but the organism had never been found in the Western Hemisphere until an outbreak in the Southwest in May.

It is spread by close contact with rodents and their droppings. Baffled doctors can only advise people to stay away from deer mice that may carry it. Only when the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention isolates the virus in its lab will scientists learn enough about it to work on treatments.

On Tuesday, after five months of analyzing samples of blood and tissue from rodents and hantavirus victims, the CDC finally had progress to report when a virologist got the virus to infect two generations of mice — the first step to isolating a virus.

Clinton to meet with China's president

NEW YORK — President Clinton will meet in November in Seattle with Jiang Zemin, the president of China, in an effort to extricate relations between the two countries from "some rough waters," Secretary of State Warren Christopher said Thursday.

It will be the first visit to the United States by a Chinese leader since the crackdown on dissidents in Tiananmen Square in Beijing in 1989 sent relations between the two countries on a downward spiral still marked by controversy over nuclear weapons testing.

Clinton probably will send Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen and Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy to China in an attempt to improve relations, a senior U.S. official told reporters.

"It's a recognition on both sides that efforts have to be made," said the official, who insisted on anonymity.

Clinton will be in Seattle with Asian leaders attending a conference designed to foster economic development.

Utah schools meet U.S. education goals

SALT LAKE CITY — While much of the country is making slow progress toward meeting the six national education goals, Utah's schools are doing well, according to the Utah Office of Education.

"If you look at the records for the state of Utah, there is a fair amount of good news in almost all of the goals that are related to the public school mission," said David E. Nelson, director of assessment and evaluation for the state Office of Education.

But nationally, U.S. Education Secretary Richard Riley said, the results show how far the country has yet to go to achieve the six goals established in 1990 by the president and the nation's governors. The six objectives came out of an education summit.

The goals include having every child enter school ready to learn, a 90 percent graduation rate, all students at grades four, eight and 12 demonstrating competency in basic subjects and prepared for responsible citizenship, U.S. students first in the world in math and science, full-adult literacy and schools free of drugs and violence.

Nelson said Utah's graduation rate of 91.3 percent now surpasses the national goal.

Health officials urge flu shots for elderly

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Public health officials appealed to older Americans Thursday to get their flu shots early, before an especially virulent strain of influenza begins spreading. For the first time Medicare will pick up the costs for the elderly and disabled, the government announced.

"Today, we think of the flu more as a nuisance than a plague," said Health and Human Services Secretary Donna E. Shalala. "This misconception costs lives."

This year's flu — known as A-Beijing — has already caused three outbreaks in Louisiana and is expected to hit hard. The strain has been associated with more sickness and death among people 65 and older, according to Dr. Philip R. Lee, assistant secretary for health.

The chronically ill are also particularly vulnerable to complications from the flu.

This includes children with asthma and people with AIDS.

"It will strike suddenly, sending victims to bed with very high temperatures and very low energy," Shalala said.

Because the flu season is expected to begin earlier than usual, the government is urging at-risk Americans to get their shots before the end of October, rather than waiting until mid-November.

"This is a year when it's of even greater importance than ever to have those flu shots," said Lee, who is 69 and plans to get his flu shot soon. "I can't stress enough the seriousness of this potential epidemic, the urgency of getting the immunizations, and getting them in October."

Medicare will now pick up the costs of a flu shot for Americans 65 and older and the disabled.

Those who take advantage of the new benefit won't have any out-of-pocket costs, HHS said. They would otherwise have to spend anywhere from $8 to $40 for a shot.

Medicare expects to spend about $50 million to cover the costs of the flu shots, but believes it will save at least that much through reduced hospitalization and treatment.

Influenza affects 25 million to 50 million Americans every year. During many years, more than 10,000 Americans die from the flu and its complications, but in some years the number of deaths climbs to 45,000 or more.

Groups at risk of influenza complications include:

- Those 65 and older.
- Residents of nursing homes and other chronic-care facilities.
- Adults and children with chronic disorders of the cardiovascular or respiratory systems, including children with asthma.
- Adults and children who have received regular medical follow-up or hospitalization during the preceding year because of diabetes mellitus or

Brilliant fall leaves a result of wet winter

By ROCHELLE SINK
Universe Staff Writer

Heavy snowfall last winter and spring have produced exceptionally bright colored leaves in Utah's canyons, reminiscent of a New England fall.

"In my memory, this year has to be one of the most colorful," said Dale Stevens, professor of geography at BYU.

The leaves are brighter because the plants are healthier and have more nutrients from the wet weather, Stevens said.

"The moisture content determines the brilliance of the leaves," said Loyal Clark, public affairs specialist for the Uinta National Forest.

However, because Utah has entered a dry spell, the colors will fade more quickly, Clark said.

"There's not enough moisture to sustain the colors for a long period of time," she said.

Utah has been experiencing drought conditions for the last six years, so the colors of the leaves have been muted, Clark said.

Clark said the leaves in the front canyons — Provo Canyon, American Fork Canyon and Hobbie Creek Canyon — can be found in three main types and colors. Maple trees have red leaves, oak trees have orange leaves and Quaking Aspens have yellow leaves, she said.

The maple leaves are now reaching their peak and will fade in the couple of weeks, Clark said.

For those interested in driving the canyon to look at the leaves, several locations are recommended.

"Squaw Peak Trail has two hills of colored leaves," Kimberly Roy, information specialist for the Utah County Travel Council, said.

Roy also described the Alpine area as a "beautiful area" this fall. It can turn off onto the side roads to take pictures," she said.

Both the Squaw Peak Trail and Alpine Loop are well-paved, said.

"The Alpine Loop is packed with weekends with bumper-to-bumper traffic," Clark said.

Top 25 football teams prepare for lazy weekend

The Associated Press

It's a busy divorce court, this week's Top 25 college football schedule filled with mismatches.

Georgia Southern at No. 3 Miami, Oklahoma at Iowa State, Duke at Tennessee, San Jose State at Washington, Texas El-Paso at North Carolina, No. 18 Louisville at Pittsburgh. Can you spell any-one of the Top 25 teams Saturday, and not one of them is a ranked opponent. Only two teams are favored by less than a touchdown (No. 12 Arizona vs. Southern Cal and No. 25 West Virginia vs. Virginia Tech) and only one is an underdog (No. 24 North Carolina State at Clemson). Duke (No. 4 Notre Dame at Stanford) encounters trouble on the road. North Carolina and Stanford are dandies because they have standout quarterbacks, Steve Taneyhill for the Tar Heels and Steve Stenstrom for the Cardinal. But both teams have been disappointing so far, losing two of their first four games. Georgia Tech (plus 31 1/2) at No. 1

Florida St. Seminoles have won 11 straight ... FLORIDA ST. 45-7.

No. 2 Alabama (no line) at South Carolina. Tide leads series 8-0 ... ALABAMA 28-14.

Georgia Southern (no line) at No. 3 Miami. No brawls, no contest ... MIAMI 48-0.

No. 4 Notre Dame (minus 9 1/2) at Stanford. Stanford has won two of last three vs. Irish ... NOTRE DAME 27-24.

Mississippi St. (plus 17) at No. 5 Florida. Bulldogs haven't won at Gainesville since 1965 ... FLORIDA 37-17.

Northwestern (plus 19) at No. 7 Ohio St. Buckeyes averaging 39 points per game ... OHIO ST. 31-17.

Iowa (plus 22 1/2) at No. 8 Michigan. Tyrone Wheatley leads nation in all-purpose yardage ... MICHIGAN 34-10.

No. 9 Penn St. (minus 17 1/2) at Maryland. Nittany Lions lead series 34-1-1 ... PENN ST. 44-24.

No. 10 Oklahoma (minus 19) at Iowa St. Sooners are 8-0 at Cyclone Stadium ... OKLAHOMA 45-17.

Duke (plus 27 1/2) at No. 11 Tennessee. Teams have split last six meetings ... TENNESSEE 44-14.

Southern Cal (plus 11 1/2) at No. 12 Arizona. Trojans win defensive struggle ... SOUTHERN CAL 14-13.

Boston College (plus 7 1/2) at No. 13 Syracuse. Orangemen have won six straight over Eagles ... SYRACUSE 24-17.

No. 14 Texas A&M (minus 12) at Texas Tech. Aggies often have tough time at Lubbock ... TEXAS A&M 32-28.

San Jose St. (no line) at No. 15 Washington. San Jose is 0-4 ... WASHINGTON 42-6.

Texas El-Paso (plus 38) at No. 16 N. Carolina. Miners lost 52-0 to Hawaii last week ... N. CAROLINA 49-7.

Oregon (plus 11 1/2) at No. 17 California. Battle of unbeaten ... CALIFORNIA 31-21.

No. 18 Louisville (minus 17 1/2) at Pittsburgh. Panthers are pitiful ... LOUISVILLE 52-10.

Ohio University (no line) at No. 21 Virginia. Bobcats remain winless ... VIRGINIA 48-7.

No. 23 Auburn (minus 7 1/2) at Vanderbilt. Tigers off to best start since 1988 ... AUBURN 24-14.

No. 24 N. Carolina St. (plus 1) at Clemson. Wolfpack rebounds from loss to North Carolina ... N.C. STATE 17-14.

Virginia Tech (plus 2) at No. 25 W. Virginia. Hokies upset Mountaineers ... VIRGINIA TECH 21-17.

BYU takes rest before facing brutal October schedule

By JEFF CALL
Sports Editor

As BYU takes a well-deserved respite this weekend, it's time to pause, take a deep breath and absorb what has happened to the Cougars so far this season.

Besides BYU's drubbing of Air Force, there's been no traditional bullying of WAC foes so far this year. The Cougars' first three games — decided by 11 points — were more intense than "The Fugitive" and seemed to drain them.

So much for the past. After the Cougars' convincing win over the Falcons last week, suddenly hopes in Provo are buoyed as BYU wades into the toughest part of its schedule the next three weeks, as the Cougars meet UCLA (who beat San Diego State Thursday night, 52-14), Notre Dame and Fresno State back to back to back.

For now, though, the Cougars will enjoy the break as they prepare for the Bruins.

"We are working for improvement all of the time and this bye week is no different," coach LaVell Edwards said. "We've got to improve. We are getting more healthy. We are getting ready to play UCLA just like we do any other game."

BYU won't practice today or Saturday and will use the time to relax. And the Cougars are grateful for the R and R.

"I think everyone will be healthy for UCLA," said linebacker Todd Herget. "Guys need rest."

After rolling up 641 yards of total offense last week and holding the Falcons to just a field goal, the Cougars appear to be more confident. "We're starting to jell now," Herget said. "This game really helps our confidence ... I'm very happy with the progress we've made thus far."

"This (win) could carry us over for the rest of the season," said defensive lineman Lenny Gomes after last Saturday's game. If it could just get them through October, BYU would be beaming — and would probably climb in the polls, too.

UNIVERSALS: The last time BYU started a football season 4-0 — in 1990 — the Cougars lost game No. 5 to Oregon of the PAC-10. BYU will have to wait until next week to try to notch its fifth win of 1993 against UCLA, another PAC-10 team.

Lobos hope to upset 'Bows in WAC play

The Associated Press

With four of its first five games at home and renewed fan interest, New Mexico had expected a better start than the 1-3 record it currently is saddled with.

But the Lobos can go a long way toward erasing that early disappointment Saturday night when they entertain Hawaii.

Despite their record, the Lobos can point to significant gains in 1993:

• After blowing second-half leads in its three losses, the Lobos left nothing to chance in routing New Mexico State 42-7 last week.

• Against the Aggies, UNM showed a balanced offense, getting 262 yards rushing and 216 passing.

• Last week they held New Mexico State to 190 total yards, marking the first time in nine years that a Lobo team had held an opponent to fewer than 200 yards total offense.

• They lead the Western Athletic Conference in turnover margin and net punting, and quarterback Stoney Case ranks first in the WAC and fifth in the nation in total offense at 316 yards per game.

The Lobos must feel they have a score to settle this weekend. Hawaii has treated the Lobos badly, winning the last nine meetings, and doing so by an average score of 39-15.

The Rainbow Warriors (3-1) bring the nation's No. 1 rushing attack into the game, averaging 336.5 yards per game. They're also leading the WAC in total defense, rushing defense and scoring defense.

"Hawaii could be the best team in the WAC," UNM coach Dennis Franchione said.

But the Rainbows had better not overlook the Lobos, who boast the 10th-best offense in the country (474.0).

In the only other WAC game of the weekend, Wyoming travels to Air Force.

San Diego State (3-1) entertains UCLA (1-2) Thursday night. On Saturday, Colorado State (1-3) plays at Kansas (1-3), Texas-El Paso (1-3) visits No. 16 North Carolina (4-1), and Utah (2-2) entertains Idaho (3-0). No. 20 Brigham Young, which leads the WAC with a 4-0 league log, and Fresno State are idle.

Hawaii, 1-1 in WAC play and already a victim of BYU, can ill afford another WAC setback. New Mexico is 0-2 in WAC play.

The Rainbows expect to have quarterback Michael Carter back in the lineup this week. He injured his ankle in the first quarter of last week's 52-0 rout of UTEP. The Lobos expect to have the services of running back Winslow Oliver, who sat out the second half last week with a tight hamstring.

Wyoming (3-1 overall, 1-0 in the WAC) guns for its fourth straight victory, while Air Force (1-3, 0-3) seeks to avoid its fourth straight defeat.

The Cowboys will try to exploit a vulnerable AFA defense which has surrendered 537 and 641 yards the last two games — the most yards ever given up by Air Force in back-to-back games.

Wyoming quarterback Joe Hughes passed for 225 yards and two TDs in the Cowboys' 28-12 win over Utah last week, while the defense did not surrender a touchdown.

Sophomore Demond Cash has taken over the quarterback duties for Air Force and he leads the team with 270 yards rushing, but the Falcons managed just 244 total yards in last week's 30-3 loss to BYU.

If you're a BYU student employee, you're probably making more money today.

The campus minimum wage is rising 20 cents to $5.20 an hour, effective today. Time-card employees previously earning between $5 and $7.20 will automatically receive a 20-cent per cent increase, said Penny Morrell, director of Student Employment Services. "If you make more, you won't get a raise," she said. "The raise is automatically handled by the computer."

Don Lloyd, assistant administrative president of Human Resources Services, said the raise affects almost every time-card employee. Money for the increase comes from the budget allocated to the university, she said. "We conducted a campus-wage survey and we have the funds, students can't get an increase," she said. "Cost of living goes play a part, but we don't raise wages every year."

Del Brooks, director of Dining Services, said the raise would affect 2,200 students employed in his department. The money for wages in Dining Services comes from the university's self-supporting fund; the money for the raise is budgeted by the Church, he said.

He added that Dining Services is not to be on the same pay schedule as the rest of campus, but a raise is periodical.

Man behind phone system voice retiring from LDS film studio

By LANCE WILSON
Special to the Universe

A man whose voice is heard every time a student calls the BYU phone system is retiring from the LDS Motion Picture Studio.

Ray, film vault manager for the studio, will retire after what he describes as "a long and satisfying career."

In 1984, students registering by phone have heard May's voice come over the phone. "I entered an action code now..."

May said he has visited many foreign countries and met many different types of people because of his job.

May said one of his hobbies is restoring an old Model "A" Ford. As well as being voice for the telephone registration system, May announces emergency procedure information at sporting events and is the backup announcer for "Music and the Spoken Word," the Sunday broadcast of the Mormon Tabernacle Choir.

"It's a great benefit for the student worker," he said. "We applaud the situation for better pay than in the outside community because we get the better employees."

Morrell said some community employers may be upset at BYU's wage increase.

The 20-cent increase will also place BYU's minimum wage 95 cents higher than the minimum wages at Utah Valley State College and the University of Utah.

Morrell said the wage increase wouldn't be entered into the computer until Thursday.

May said, "It's important that you find a job you enjoy and be happy."

May said he has had many memorable experiences while working on more than 300 films produced since his arrival. Some of the films include "How Rare a Possession" and "A More Perfect Union."

"My most memorable experience was when we went to England to record the temple film in eight different languages," he said. "It's very difficult to synchronize the words with the movement of the actors' lips."

Symposium speaker stresses civil duty

By KARL BECKSTRAND
Universe Staff Writer

Robert Wood of the Naval War College gave a Latter-day Saint perspective of moral responsibility and civil duty Thursday morning as the keynote speaker for the Kennedy Center Symposium on American security policy.

Wood urged students and faculty not to fear globalization of the economy and government nor to make sweeping denunciations of U.S. society in general.

Citing Doctrine and Covenants 98:5-6, Wood encouraged the development of a state based on the Constitution.

"It's impossible to isolate politically or spiritually now," he said, and noted we should welcome institutions and policies that allow us to represent Christ to the world and expose people to democracy.

Drawing on Abraham Lincoln's Gettysburg Address, Wood explained how our democratic society and its principles must survive if the rest of the world is to hope to have them.

Today, the lines are blurred over borders, he said.

"America has changed," Wood said. "Don't be afraid of expansion," he said in reference to the North American Free Trade Agreement. "It is a means of dealing with trends (that are already occurring)."

Wood encouraged students to actively involve themselves in improving society, to seek divine confirmation of individual efforts and government proposals, and to base values on what is "real" and what God thinks is right.

DISCUSSION: Panelists, from left, Eugene England and Robert Wood, comment on national security during the "Moral Perspectives on American Security Policy" symposium Thursday.

End of Cold War changes role of national security

and GAYLON GARBETT

Those who attended the panel discussions of the American Security Policy Symposium were given an uncommon view of the U.S. national security stand as seen by LDS scholars.

The first panel, entitled "The Burden of Victory: U.S. National Security Objectives After the Cold War," began a series of events making up the two-day symposium, "Moral Perspectives on American Security Policy: Views from the Community of LDS Scholars."

One of the scheduled panelists, Fred Axelgard, a BYU graduate working for the U.S. State Department, was unable to attend, but his comments were read by a colleague.

Axelgard proposed that the role of national security in the post-Cold War era should be "more comprehensive and less absolute."

"With all these recent changes, our concept of national security has relaxed," he said. "I believe the narrow and absolutist conceptualism which prevailed during the Cold War has a spiritually debilitating impact."

The second panel addressed the issues of the emerging international security environment.

China and Russia are the two countries posing a threat to the United States, said Bruce Porter, an associate professor of political science.

Porter said it is perceived that Chinese military spending is on the increase, leaving America with the logical response of keeping military preparedness high and strengthening relations with Japan.

Russia poses a different question, Porter said. Russia could possibly end up going either way, depending upon its ability to remain in a state of democracy.

The biggest threat to U.S. security may not be external, but internal, Porter said.

"At the present time our society is badly divided among partisan, ethnic, gender, religious and ideological lines. In some respects, more divided than since the 1850s," he said.

Eugene England, professor of English, spoke on the principle of justice and mercy, saying that Americans have to make a choice between the two.

When people have mercy they will love their enemies, bless those that curse them and love one another as Christ taught, England said.

CELEBRATION: Members of the Hebrew Club constructed a hut Thursday to commemorate the Jewish holiday Succoth.

Hebrew Club builds hut to celebrate Jewish holiday

By MATTHEW FRANCK
Campus Editor

Several students used branches, leaves and wood Thursday to bridge the cultural gap between BYU and Israel.

In celebration of the Jewish holiday Succoth, or the Feast of the Tabernacles, the Hebrew Club constructed a hut, or succah, used to commemorate the event.

The holiday began Wednesday and runs through the weekend.

Hebrew Club president Joel Sabroaski, 24, a senior majoring in Near Eastern Studies, said he and the club decided to construct the hut to get a palpable lesson in Jewish culture.

Since none of the club members are Jewish, Sabroaski relied on textbooks and his own experience in Israel to ensure that the club's observance was orthodox.

The huts allude to the makeshift nomadic shelters the children of Israel constructed in their 40-year exodus from Egypt to Israel.

The festival also coincides with the harvest, in which Jewish families construct the succahs in the fields so they can reap the fields without having to travel to and from home each day.

Today, Jewish families use the succahs to house the weekend's feast.

In some areas massive succahs are built for the entire community.

Sabroaski says the huts can be made of any material, but the roof must be organic.

Mock disaster aids local agencies

By STEPHEN PARKER
Universe Staff Writer

It was apparent from the beginning that this was no ordinary disaster. Victims with charred flesh, internal injuries and cracked skulls were smiling.

This was the scene at the Hope Campground wildfire disaster drill in Provo Canyon Wednesday. Several Utah County police rescue agencies, the Utah Valley Regional Medical Center and others participated in the drill designed to test emergency plans and procedures. Participants were present to train in the event of a real emergency.

The American Red Cross supplied the 32 victims who were dressed and made up to appear frighteningly realistic to the rescuers.

Personnel from the Uinta National Forest Service directed the mock fire-fight and supplied information about the casualties in the wooded campground.

"This drill will help train us to work in an integrated command system to allow a more effective rescue effort," said Provo Police Chief Swen Nielsen.

Members of the BYU Disaster Task Force, Timpanogos Emergency Rescue Team and Provo Police Department helped coordinate triage efforts, tending to the most critically injured first. Police set up roadblocks to prevent wandering hikers and sightseers from interfering with rescue efforts.

As rescuers traversed the forest gathering up victims and tending their horrifying wounds, one young victim was temporarily lost in the shuffle. His face painted a ghastly gray, he complained of respiratory problems because of asthma. Determining that his condition was not critical, rescuers grouped him with other victims and went back into the forest.

However, this boy was no longer role-playing. He was actually having an asthma attack. Finally able to convince the others he was not kidding, the boy was given real medical attention.

The Sheriff's Communications Auxiliary Team directed radio communications from atop Squaw Peak Outlook, informing agencies of the condition of the mock fire. Before the drill was completed, forest service officials reported that 1,000 acres had been burned because of an abandoned campfire.

Authorities radioed for air rescue, and a Life Flight Helicopter descended upon the dirt road at Squaw Peak Overlook. Rescuers strapped a victim to a stretcher, and lifted him into the helicopter.

Nielsen and others watched as the helicopter flew toward UVRMC, where the victim would be treated for a cracked skull and other injuries.

Officials reported 30 injuries and two deaths in the final casualty count as the other victims were taken by vans to UVRMC to test the center's mass casualty plan.

Officer Karen Morales, coordinator of the wildfire drill, gathered with officials from each agency to assess the success of the event as a couple climbed up onto the overlook from a hiking trail looking dazed and confused.

Authorities quickly informed the couple the event was a simulation. Kay and Mona Peterson shrugged off their anxiety with a sigh of relief.

"We hiked up over the mountain and wondered what was going on," Kay Peterson said. "We saw the helicopter and the police and came up to see what had happened."

Housing shortage leaves many homeless

By MICHELLE SUZUKI
Universe Staff Writer

Homelessness is just as relevant a problem in Utah County as it is in the rest of the country.

Myla Dutton, executive director of the Community Action Agency, said the homeless situation in Utah County is caused by a housing shortage.

"Even people with available money can't find homes to buy in Utah Valley," she said.

"People asking less than $100,000 sell their homes the same day it is put on the market. How can the working poor afford to buy a home so quickly and with cash?"

The homeless problem is intensified by fierce job competition within the valley, Dutton said.

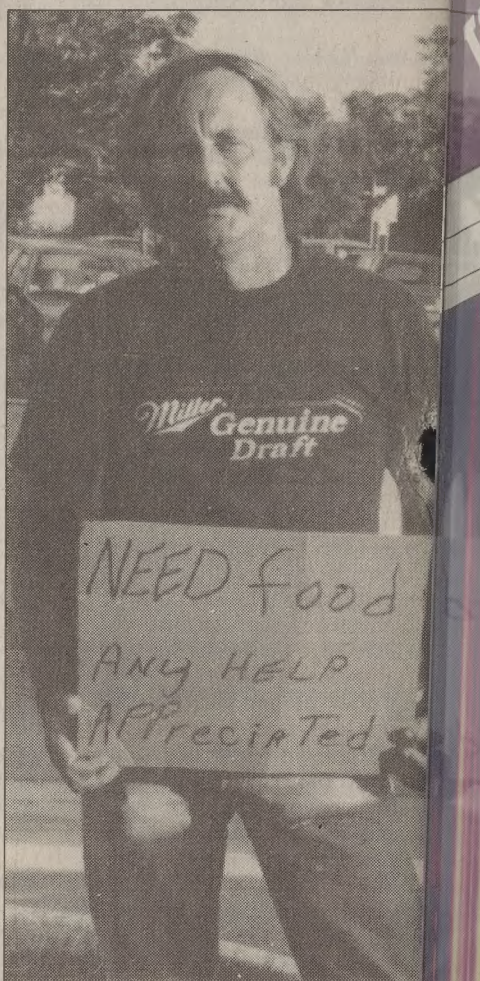

"The working poor generally have high school educations and maybe a couple years of college," she said. "Here in Utah County, they are competing for jobs with people who have master's degrees."

Dutton said there are different groups that find themselves without a permanent residence.

"Single, transient males are very mobile," she said. "We don't provide an extensive amount of service to them as a group because we mainly focus on families."

Dutton said most families who find themselves without a home turn to family and friends for help.

"We estimate that there are a couple thousand families within Utah County living in this type of 'shared

Yeltsin, hard-liners agree to mediated talks

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — President Boris Yeltsin agreed Thursday to church-mediated talks with hard-line lawmakers in an effort to break the siege of parliament and end Russia's 10-day-old political crisis.

Yeltsin's announcement came after a meeting at the Kremlin with Patriarch Alexy II, head of the Russian Orthodox Church.

The patriarch's offer to mediate the power struggle underscored the church's growing influence since the decline of Communism.

Yeltsin's rebellious vice president, Alexander Rutskoi, a leader of the 100 or so lawmakers holed up in parliament, sent the patriarch a message saying he was "ready to meet Alexy II and any other representative of authorities," according to the ITAR-Tass news agency.

Other hard-line lawmakers have said they were willing to negotiate if the church acted as mediator.

Thousands of riot troops continued to ring the building, known as the White House.

Power, water and phones have been cut off to the building, and food supplies were running low.

Yeltsin said he disbanded the Soviet-era parliament to break 18 months of political deadlock in which the lawmakers slowed the president's free-market reforms and rolled back his powers.

On Wednesday, Yeltsin gave lawmakers until next Monday to surrender their weapons and leave the White House or face "serious consequences."

Deputy Security Minister Sergei Stepashin told the Tass newspaper that militants in parliament had up to 800 firearms.

A statement issued jointly by Yeltsin and the patriarch said Alexy urged that bloodshed be avoided.

"The need was stressed to take measures making it possible to alleviate the situation without allowing violence," it said.

Yeltsin vowed to defend the "civil rights of the population and human rights."

The government will be represented at the talks by Sergei Filatov, the president's chief of staff, and Oleg Soskovets, a first deputy prime minister.

Yeltsin's aides said parliament would be represented by Ramazan Abdulatipov and Veniamin Sokolov, high-ranking parliament officials not among the lawmakers inside the parliament building.

Sokolov said earlier Thursday that lawmakers would surrender their weapons if the police blockade ends and the government gives "firm guarantees" not to punish the hard-liners.

Yeltsin showed no signs of bending on the substance of his dispute with parliament.

Hard-liners have been demanding simultaneous presidential and parliamentary elections in March.

The president's aides stressed again Thursday that Yeltsin would not agree to simultaneous elections.

He has called for parliamentary elections in December and a presidential poll six months later.

Yeltsin met with leaders of his election committee Thursday to continue work on preparing the ballot.

He has been issuing decrees giving pay raises and higher welfare benefits to Russia's poor.

Opponents now accuse him of trying to buy popular allegiance at the cost of accelerating inflation.

Supporters say the boost in government spending will protect vulnerable citizens before national controls on bread prices are lifted Friday.

Some regional government representatives meeting in Moscow on Thursday urged both sides to resolve the confrontation and demanded Yeltsin end the blockade. They warned that the conflict could widen if he does not.

Regional power struggles echo those in the capital: Local administrators appointed by Yeltsin are vying for power with regional parliaments.

Many regional legislators represent the same military, industrial, nationalist and ex-Communist interests that many national lawmakers do, and they often lack meaningful popular support.

A top Yeltsin aide dismissed the Moscow meeting as an attempt to preserve Soviet political structures.

The government began sending Cabinet members out to some of Russia's far-flung regions to drum up support for Yeltsin, the ITAR-Tass news agency reported.

Siberian regional lawmakers threatened to block a major railway, withhold taxes and disrupt fuel deliveries unless the government ended the standoff.

U.N. relief effort in Bosnia complicated by peace plan failure

The Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — With a second winter of war approaching following the failure of the latest Bosnian peace plan, U.N. officials gave a stark warning Thursday of impending human catastrophe.

"Humanitarian prospects for literally millions of people have never looked so bleak," said U.N. civil affairs chief Cedric Thornberry. "We are looking into an abyss."

Thornberry spoke in Zagreb, Croatia, a day after the Bosnian parliament rejected demands that the Sarajevo government concede military defeat and accept partition of the republic.

U.N. officials have been warning for weeks that the lack of a peace deal will hamper their efforts to reach 2.7 million needy people this winter.

Bosnian officials maintain they do not believe the international plan would bring lasting peace and are determined to continue pressing for more land in eastern Bosnia. Bosnian leaders also insist that the Bosnian Serbs should not be allowed to keep land they took by force.

U.N. officials acknowledged those arguments, but said they do not change reality.

"The idea of breaking up Bosnia into three countries ... has been criticized as morally repugnant," said Thornberry. "But it is a lot less morally barbaric than the slaughter we have seen for the past 18 months."

He said it was essential for the peace talks to continue.

In Sarajevo, spokesman Ray Wilkinson of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees also suggested that there may be tactical motives for politicians' actions.

"For some, it's better to have a political symbol than having their people living on a slightly higher level," he said.

International mediators Thorvald Stoltenberg of the United Nations and Lord David Owen of the European Community met in Geneva to decide on their next steps. Stoltenberg said he did not know if there was any hope for progress after the Bosnian parliament vote.

U.N. officials said they feared a new outbreak of fighting.

Three tank rounds crashed into downtown Sarajevo on Thursday, and hospital officials said 16 people had been wounded during the day in the Bosnian capital by shelling and mortar fire.

The commander of the Bosnian army, Gen. Rasim Delic, announced he was calling a unilateral cease-fire to begin Thursday in central Bosnia, and said he expected the Croats to reciprocate.

Mate Boban, the Bosnian Croat leader, told reporters in the coastal Bosnian town of Neum, that the Bosnian army was continuing to attack despite the cease-fire offer.

Delic said he had received no order to use force to retake territories the Bosnian parliament were demanding be returned, but that he would if ordered.

Warning of the "huge losses" that would likely accompany an offensive, Delic added, "I would still prefer for this to be resolved politically."

Fighting and intransigence on all sides has repeatedly held up aid convoys, and winter conditions on poor mountain roads further hamper passage of cumbersome trucks.

Rejection of the peace plan, "leaves us looking into the jaws of disaster," Wilkinson said. "We have warned before that unless there is a speedy peace, the whole operation could be compromised. That now looks likely."

He said it is unlikely that the U.N. can meet its target of delivering food, medicine and other aid to people in Bosnia this winter, if fighting continues.

Naveed Hussain, the U.N. refugee agency's field officer for Bosnia, reiterated concerns that aid donations be sent down and the agency is short about half of the estimated $350 million needed to feed, clothe and shelter Bosnians warm through March. Most are still trapped in Srebrenica, a town of 6,000. Most are in houses without windows or roofs.
